Orkney Heritage Society

Orkney Heritage Society is committed to the preservation of local features of historical interest. At present it is collaborating with Kirkwall Community Council to restore the Groatie Hoose or Pirate Gow's Folly and relocate it in the garden attached to the Orkney Museum. The Groatie Hoose is a summerhouse constructed in around 1730. It is surmounted by a spire, built using some of the ballast from the ship, belonging to Pirate Gow, an Orcadian, and the last British pirate to be hanged for treason. His story was told in a pamphlet by Daniel Defoe and Sir Walter Scott used his exploits as source material for his novel, The Pirate. A grant from Esmée Fairbairn Foundation is being used to create an access path, interpretive panels and general landscaping.

Peterborough Museum and Art Gallery
Peterborough Museum and Art Gallery seeks to collect artefacts and documents relating to the development of the region, and to make these accessible in ways that both stimulate interest in the achievements of the past and provide inspiration for the future. The archaeological collections include artefacts and assemblages of national significance. The grant from the Esmée Fairbairn Foundation will contribute to the refurbishment of the archaeology gallery during 2005 by supporting a part-time Project Officer post and contributing to the purchase of materials necessary for the display and interpretation of important archaeological artefacts currently held in storage.
